Завдання 41–50 перевіряють навички читання. Прочитайте текст. Виберіть правильні відповіді до завдань і позначте їх у бланку відповідей літерами a, b, c або d.

You are going to read an extract from an autobiography. For questions 41–50, choose the answer (a, b, c or d) which you think fits best according to the text.

There was nothing unusual about Wellington Street, or so I thought as I was growing up. The cobbled street, one of four identical streets next to each other, was calm, apart from the occasional sound of raised voices from the pub on the corner. Everybody said hello to each other. Although rarely much more than that. It was the kind of street that in the past had covered the whole of the north-west of England, affordable housing for the workers, the kind of street that used to be the heart of a community. Now it was a relic, unchanged while the modern world went on around it.

The first time I got a sense that my childhood world was not going to remain the same forever was when a letter arrived from the local council saying that a meeting was being held locally to discuss the development of the area. I remember wondering why areas had to be developed and I asked my father. He said that people just liked changing things for the sake of it but my mum interrupted him and explained that the houses needed modernising. Even then I could see this as another move in their ongoing argument about money and location. Mum, with her keen sense of social position and always very aware of what the neighbours thought, wanted to move into a better house, which Dad took to mean a more expensive house.

The evening of the meeting came around and my dad and I went along. It had already started when we got there and one of the councillors was trying to explain the plans, although the general reaction from the audience was far from positive. I don't remember the details, but I remember some shouting, until finally one of our neighbours stood up and said that he wasn't giving his permission for any of it. I remember the councillor saying then, 'We don't need permission. We're telling you, not asking you.'

The mood when we got home was tense. Although she tried to hide it, I think Mum was secretly quite pleased. Dad sat and frowned at the TV for a while, before Mum brought him a cup of tea. I was surprised when it was he who broke the silence after a minute or two and said, 'There are one or two nice places up around Ladybridge.' Mum said nothing. She just sipped her tea and looked at me and smiled.

41 The writer describes the street as a place where

- a) everyone could afford their own house
- b) people felt they were part of a community

- a) quiet
- b) connected with the city
- c) the busiest in the town
- d) unlike other streets of the town

43 Streets of this kind had been built in the past because they were

- a) cheap
- b) long-lasting
- c) traditional
- d) comfortable

44 What did the writer not understand when the letter arrived?

- a) why his parents were arguing
- b) who had organised the meeting
- c) where they were going to live next
- d) why things had to change

45 The writer's Dad said that
 a) houses need modernising
 b) people like changing things
 c) it was a point of location
 d) he wanted to move into a better house

46 Why did the writer's mother want to move into another house?
 a) She didn't like the neighbours.
 b) She liked to impress other people.
 c) She knew it would annoy the writer's father.
 d) She thought the local council would help.

47 The writer and his Dad came to the meeting

Telling a story

This love story needs an ending! First read. Then think of an ending. It may be funny, sad, happy, or surprising. Use your imagination!

IN THE NAME OF LOVE

Beatriz put down her pen and slowly folded the letter. Carefully she put it into the airmail envelope and wrote the familiar address. In her mind, she saw Paulo's face. He will get this letter in six or seven days, she thought. My God! What will he feel? What will he think?
